THE NEWSPAPER REGISTRATION (AMENDMENT) ACT 2004

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

In 2002, an amendment to the Newspaper Registration Act (No 14 of 2002) was enacted transferring the register of newspapers from the hands of the Company Registrar to the Ministry responsible for matters relating to media and newspapers. It also established the Newspaper Complaints Commission to deal with complaints against newspapers who breached section 16 of the amending Act. It also recommends to the Registrar whether or not the newspaper breaching section 16 of the Act shall be de-registered.

The amending Act repeals the provisions setting up the Newspaper Complaints Commission and its functions.

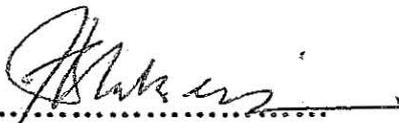

It also takes away the power of the Registrar to strike off any newspaper breaching section 16 from the register.

In essence this amending Act preserves the duties of the newspapers as set out in section 16. Any newspaper contravening the provisions of section 16 commits a criminal offence and can only be prosecuted.
