§17. Labor dispute affecting Public Interests; Procedure.

If the dispute is in any industry, business, or institution affected with a public interest, which includes, but is not restricted to, any industry, business, or institution engaged in supplying the necessities of life, safety, or health, so that a temporary suspension of its operation would endanger the life, safety, health, or well-being of a substantial number of people of any community, the provisions of section 7 shall apply. The commissioner may appoint a fact finding commission composed of three members to conduct a hearing and make a report on the issues involved and the merits of the respective contentions of the parties to the dispute. If there is no agreement or charter which governs the controversy, the labor referee shall make such decision as, in consideration of past history of the organization, harmonious operation of the industry, and most effective representation for collective bargaining, will best promote industrial peace. If the labor organizations involved in the controversy so desire, they may submit the controversy to a tribunal of the federation or labor organization which has granted their charters or to arbitration before a tribunal selected by themselves, provided the controversy is so submitted prior to the appointment of a labor referee to act in the controversy. No court shall have jurisdiction to issue a temporary or permanent injunction in any case involving or growing out of the violation of sections 12 and 13 as herein defined, except after hearing the testimony of witnesses in open court, with opportunity for cross examination, in support of the allegations made under oath, and testimony in opposition thereto, if offered, and except after findings of fact by the court to the effect that the acts set forth in sections 12 and 13 have been threatened and will be committed unless restrained, or have been committed and will be continued unless restrained. No temporary restraining order may be issued under the provisions of this Act except upon the testimony of witnesses produced by the applicant in open court and upon a record being kept of such testimony nor unless the temporary restraining order is returnable within seven days from the time it is granted which shall be noted on the order of the court. It shall be the duty of the court to give the trial or hearing of any suits or proceedings arising under this section precedence over all other civil suits which are ready for trial. Failure of the trial court to decide a motion for a temporary injunction within seven days from the date the hearing thereon is concluded shall dissolve any restraining order issued therein without further order of the court. Failure of the trial court to decide any suit brought under this section within 45 days from the date the trial was ended shall dissolve any restraining order or temporary injunction issued therein without further order of the court.

§22. Violators Not Entitled to Benefits of Certain Sections.

Any employer, employee, or labor organization who has violated any of the provisions of this Act with respect to any labor dispute shall not be entitled to any of the benefits of this Act respecting such labor disputes and such employer, employee, or labor organization shall not be entitled to maintain in any court an action for injunctive relief with respect to any matters growing out of that labor dispute, until good faith use is made of all means available under the laws of the Republic for the peaceable settlement of the dispute.
